RE: APN «apn» / «situs»

Anderson Valley Community Services District (AVCSD) is currently in the planning phase for the development of a community water system. The effort is being funded by a grant from the California State Water Resources Control Board. This public interest survey will be used to evaluate the community's interest in connecting to the water system, which will assist Brelje and Race Consulting Engineers with the planning effort and water rate analysis. The more survey responses received, the more accurate projected water rates for the community will be. The more property owners that choose to participate in the project, the lower the monthly costs will be for each customer. Were the water system in operation today, the estimated average monthly cost for a parcel with a single-family residence would be $80-$90 depending on the participation rate.

Please refer to the included letter for more information on this project and its benefits. Please return the survey in the included stamped and addressed envelope by March 15, 2023.

Would you be interested in connecting to the Anderson Valley Community Services District water system for your drinking water supply?
